THE MARDI GRAS BAL MASQUE The Mardi Gras "bal masque" at Madison Square Garden on Tuesday night was a bright and shining success, if a large number of fat women in short skirts is reckoned as an element of a masked bail's success. There were short and tall fat women, moderately fat women, and very fat women, a couple or so of passably good looking fat women, and a very great many fat wo-men for whom the epithet of "plain" would have been charitable. But nearly all of these fat women tripped about the floor of the garden in short skirts, and there was a display of sturdily built ankles clad in many colored stock ings, though white was the prevailing shade, which gave the lie to any cyni-cal pessimist who maintains that women, as to their physique, are degen-erating.

Of course there were some women there who were not fat; in fact, a casual observer would have said that all the women who were not very fat were very thin, but they were lost in the billows of flesh that surrounded them. Besides the thin women seemed to be as proud of tight knickerbockers and tights as their better endowed sisters were of short skirts, and that fact helped them to be lost in the crowd, and of the women who were neither fat nor thin many of them appeared in cos-

But the ball, as a ball, was not so bad. At times it seemed really lively, and the oldsters rubbed their eyes and wondered if old times were coming back again when, if a lady wished to show a yard or more of hosiery in the wir, there was none to say her nay, and f she wanted to pour a bottle of wine down her escort's neck no troublesome copper would be on hand to restrain her. The tip was out that "everything goes," and that Acting Inspector Brooks and Capt. Pickett were merely going to look on. The tip was just as potent as ever, and, although the men who did put up their mony to see the sights saw a little more than they really expected to, the tip was just as deceitful as of

The police weren't nearly as troublesome as they might have been. Naturally when a young woman in a prominently situated box insisted upon doog the couchee couchee after she had arned a couple of times, they had to take action which deprived the ball of one of its brightest lights. And when a very good looking young wom-an in street clothes insisted upon doing the split in addition to sundry high kicks, the coppers seeing that she might ruin her clothes thought it well to prevent her and escorted her to the door with excessive courtesy. And when a very large, corpulent woman in short skirts insisted on trying to kick off every hat in sight, the coppers' artistic sense was offended and had to be escorted weeping to the door. But a very fine sense of discrimination was exhibited by Capt. Pickett's men. If a young woman with a well-turned ankle ventured a sly little kick they said and did nothing. Trouble was for the woman whom nature had not favored. The swift hand of the law was upon her before her foot had fairly got into the air.

The crowd was inevitable. There was a lot of young men who wanted to be tough, and bought wine and beer for any woman who would accept it, and there weren't many who didn't. There were young men who had their best girls there. There were a lot of men, young and old, who wandered in the property of sening some far. There were a lot of Trays, etc., etc. in hope of seeing some fun. There were about three men to every woman, and a woman without a partner was something unknown. There were some men attired as women, and some wo-men dressed up as men. There was one man who attained the distinction of having been dancing at the time with the only three women that were put off the floor, and he seemed to have such a hypnotic influence on all those who danced with him that they cut up the most astonishing didos, making it remarkable that more were not put out.

At last, about six o'clock, the fiddlers packed their fiddles, the police cleared the floor, and the ball was over. A hundred or more night hawks pounced on the dancers and carried many of them off bodily, whether they liked it or no. Not a single word of French was heard the whole evening .- N. Y.

Simon S. Hartman, of Tunnelton, West Va., has been subject to attacks of colic about once a year, and would have to call a doctor and then suffer for about twelve hours as much as some do when they die. He was taken recently just the same as at other times, and concluded to try Chamberlain's Colic, Cholera and Diarrhoea Remedy. He says : "I took one dose of it and it gave me relief in five minutes.
